DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim 20, 21, 39 and 41 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Ansimov et al. (RU Pat. No. 2066350) (“Ansimov”).

Ansimov teaches the production of beer yeast by growing the yeast in a nutrient medium using molasses, malt, nitrogen and phosphorus. The fermentation is carried out in order to grow the yeast and then the yeast is ripened, washed, and dried. The use of this process results in a biomass with increased viability and efficiency. With regard to claim 41 and its limitation directed to the use of zinc, molasses and malt inherently contain zinc. While the disclosure of Ansimov does not state that the yeasts are enriched in minerals, because the process is the same as claimed, the claimed results are inherently obtained.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 22-38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ansimov.

Ansimov teaches that cited above but he disclosure is silent with respect to the amount of mineral salt that is added, the process temperatures, or pH. The amount added would be a result effective variable that it would have obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to optimize the amount of the mineral, however it is derived, in order to obtain the best possible beer yeast product. As to the temperature and pH, both claimed parameters are notoriously well known in the brewing arts and therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to perform yeast growth within the claimed parameters.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 20-39 and 41 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

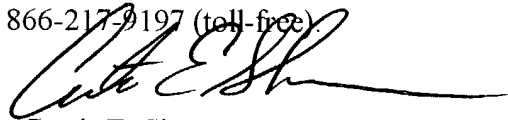

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Schudt, Jr. (USPN 4,135,000) teaches that zinc is found in beer wort or molasses (col. 2, lines 8-10).
